

FEDERAL FUNDS FOR STATE ST. PAVING SOUGHT

Elimination of Railroad Grade Crossings Is Second Request

ACTION TAKEN BY BUSINESS BUREAU

Resident Engineer Tells Group About State Highway Projects

Endorsement of the movement to get an allocation of federal funds for repaving State st. from the east to the west city limits, was given by the Salem Business Bureau in a resolution adopted at its monthly luncheon meeting Monday at the Lape dining room.

Another resolution adopted by the bureau requests federal funds for the elimination of grade crossings of the Pennsylvania railroad at West State st., and the Lisbon rd.

City council and the Columbiana County Motor club had previously adopted resolutions on the State st. paving job and the bureau decided to ask the Manufacturers' association and all civic organizations to lend their support.

Wheatley Speaks

Money for the street paving and grade elimination projects, if they are granted, would come from separate federal funds set up for these specific purposes.

Action by the bureau followed a talk by Robert Wheatley of Salineville, resident engineer of the state highway department, who stated that two sections of Route 14—Taggart st. in East Palestine and the Columbiana-Washingtonville road—were definitely on the 1936 road program. Preliminary engineering work on the latter section is about completed, he added.

The Columbiana-Washingtonville road will be a 20-foot concrete highway extending into Washingtonville as far as the Erie railroad tracks. It will be made 40 feet wide inside the village limits. As federal funds are to be used, it was necessary to comply with federal highway regulations which do not permit of more than a two per cent curve. This caused the state to purchase right-of-way to eliminate some of the curves, the state being charged with this part of the expense.

Route 9 on Program

Wheatley also assured the Salem group that the year's program includes the paving of that section of Route 9 from Salem to Walton's corners. Allocation of funds for this road is not expected until after July 1, he said.

Frost damage to highways in the county is estimated at about $40,000, Wheatley said, and throughout the state the estimated damage is $3,000,000. In many places entire sections of highways will have to be rebuilt, he added.

Cleveland Will Receive Salem Artist's Painting

The life-size picture of the Saviour, painted by John Swenningson, which has been displayed in a show window of the R. S. McCulloch Co., will be hung soon in the Cleveland City Mission.

The job sought Swenningson. For more than 10 years, the Salem artist, talented in many lines, has been welding brush here but has hesitated in embarking on a project of the proportions surrounding the reproduction of such a picture as the one he so recently completed.

Some time ago he painted a picture of Christ for the First Baptist church.

Rev. Geo. Soerheide, superintendent of the Cleveland City Mission, who chanced to be in Salem, was so captivated by the picture that he desired a picture like it for his mission.

So, through Rev. A. C. Westphal, pastor of the Baptist church, negotiations were completed whereby Swenningson agreed to paint another and the quality of his work is evidenced by the many laudatory comments heard after the picture was placed in the McCulloch store window.

The picture will be the center of impressive unveiling ceremonies in the Cleveland Mission soon, in charge of Rev. Westphal and Swenningson.

The picture then will hang in the auditorium of one of Cleveland's great institutions, which has been under the supervision of George Soerheide for the last 25 years. The Mission operates on a budget of approximately $30,000 a year and employs about 12 workers on its staff.

Ministers to Other Institutions

It is located in the downtown section, on St. Clair ave., and it ministers to 28 other Cleveland institutions, including hospitals, jails, etc.

The Mission has sent workers to the Baptist church here the last several years, and many will remember especially the "Jail Bird" quartet.

Swenningson has worked with A. R. Talbot for approximately 10 years and it is doubtful if anyone is prouder of the artist's accomplishments than the latter. Talbot has frequently urged Swenningson to try his hand at paintings of the kind he has just completed and is confident that the Salem man, with any kind of "breaks," will prove highly successful.

HALF OF CITY WITHOUT LIGHTS

City Electrician Saunders Finds Sliced Cable On West Tenth

City Electrician Lee Saunders announced cables would be repaired today in order that street lighting service might be restored to the northern section of the city tonight.

The street lights in all sections of Salem north of State st., were darkened last night as the result of a sliced cable on West Tenth st.

The break was caused, Saunders said, by a plumber cutting the wires while attempting to install a sewer. The sliced cable was thrown away by the plumber and the city didn't know of the trouble until after dusk.

BANK PROFITS BEST SINCE '31

Squire Reports $3,184,019 Gain Made by Ohio Banks Last Year

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, April 14.—Samuel H. Squire, state superintendent of banks, reported today that Ohio's 467 state-supervised banks made a net profit of $3,184,019 in 1935—the best since 1931.

"Better banking and business conditions, more efficiency in banking operation and management—the correction of mistakes of the past and effecting of important economies," Squire said, are responsible for the showing of 1935.

Operating income of the banks totaled $46,947,895, of which interest and discount on loans yielded $25,843,230, the largest single item.

Interest and dividends on bonds, stocks and other securities produced $13,076,392, and rent $2,754,965.

The banks' operating expenses amounted to $37,253,321. Of this $12,399,215 was paid out in interest on deposits, $11,423,196 in salaries, and $3,230,693 in taxes.

The net operating income totaled $19,288,871, of which $9,594,303 represented recoveries on bonds, stocks and other important items. Against this was charged off $16,104,852 for losses and depreciation, leaving $3,184,019 net profit.

For the first time in over a decade, two interpreters were required to appear before the current grand jury. Mrs. Sara J. VanFossan and Emma Martin were appointed by Judge W. F. Lones to take part in certain cases that are being investigated. Each will receive $5 for their services.

E. S. Wells of Salem has been appointed foreman of the grand jury, with Joseph Curry of Wellsville as court interpreter. Testimony is being recorded by Miss Minnie C. Higgins of Wellsville, appointed also by the court.

Program Presented At Grange Meeting

Mrs. Raymond Hart was in charge of the following program, presented recently at a meeting of Salem Grange:

GRAND JURORS OPEN INQUIRY

Columbiana County opens Probe Into Alleged Solicitations

The Columbiana county grand jury meeting in Lisbon today began an inquiry, at the instance of Attorney General John W. Bricker, into reports that state employees had been illegally solicited for campaign contributions.

The investigation was occupying most of the morning session today. Prosecuting Attorney George L. Lafferty said. A number of witnesses were subpoenaed for today's inquiry.

Lafferty said the contribution reports involved various state department employees who were said to be under civil service.

Fruit Trees Suffer Effects Of Severe Cold, Lower Reports

Long sustained sub-zero temperatures have resulted in the most winter killing and winter injury to fruit buds and wood of tree fruits, grape vines and small fruits since, 1918. County Extension Agent Floyd Lower said today.

Many terminals on peaches, cherries and plums already show definite killing. In addition to the common fruit bud killing and wood injury to the tender fruits, considerable killing and injury to the harder fruits, such as apples and sour cherries has occurred.

Gnawing injuries to tree trunks and lower limbs by both mice and rabbits has been reported, this situation being due to the heavy snows that covered the ground, reports received by Lower disclosed.

Spanish Disorders Bring One Death

(By Associated Press)

MADRID, April 14.—A police lieutenant was killed, another was seriously wounded, and a number of civilians were trampled and beaten in the capital today during a celebration of the fifth anniversary of the founding of the Republic.

The disorders began when a series of bombs exploded behind the President's reviewing stand as a military parade passed through the center of the city.

The blasts, which hurt no one, created panic among the spectators, with many injuries resulting from the crush.

SURVEY SHOWS NATURE CRUEL SINCE JANUARY

Cold, Snows, Floods, Tornadoes Fatal To 1,300 Persons

RED CROSS LISTS MANY AS INJURED

Only Five States Escape From Winter's Fury With No Deaths

By FRANK SHOLTERS.
(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 14.—Nature, attacking with every means at its command in one of its greatest offensives in years, has caused 1,300 deaths in the United States since Jan. 1.

An unusually cold winter took a heavy toll, and spring thaws brought heavy floods which drowned hundreds. Southern tornadoes completed the disaster roll.

Press Makes Survey

An Associated Press survey revealed at least 542 persons died from causes related to the severely cold weather, 548 from tornadoes, gales and lightning, and 214 from floods.

Tornadoes at Tupelo, Miss., and Gainesville, Ga., and the floods at Pittsburgh, Johnstown, Pa., and Wheeling, W. Va., took the heaviest toll.

The American Red Cross estimated that besides lives lost, major and minor disasters injured 4,924 persons, affected 622,060, destroyed 6,583 homes and damaged 44,629. Property damage ran into hundreds of millions.

Only five states—Arizona, Louisiana, Nevada, New Mexico and Texas—did not report any deaths. Ohio had seven from cold and five from floods.

The toll from wave after wave of sub-zero weather and blizzards early in the year included deaths from exposure, some automobile accidents in which snow or sleet figured, winter sports, heart attacks induced by shoveling snow or fighting a way through storms.

Several persons died of carbon monoxide poisoning in automobiles stalled in snowdrifts.

EAST LIVERPOOL COUNCIL MEETS

Rejects Cut in Police, Fire Personnel; Short Term Funds Appropriated

EAST LIVERPOOL, April 14.—Rejecting an ordinance which would reduce the personnel of the police and fire departments, East Liverpool city council last night passed its appropriation measure for 1936 with only enough money to operate a full police force for four months and a fire department for two and one half months.

The budget set $473,000 for the current year, and $58,000 was sliced from the general fund.

Former Resident Dies In New Castle

Mrs. Jessie Curtis Snyder, wife of Clinton L. Snyder of New Castle, Pa., died Monday afternoon at her home in New Castle after a three months' illness.

Mrs. Snyder was born in Pittsburgh on Jan. 11, 1872, but had spent nearly all of her early life in Salem. She was a graduate of the Salem High school and Salem Business college. Mrs. Snyder was well-known in New Castle and vicinity, where she had lived for 34 years.

A son, Joel C., preceded her in death four years ago.

She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. L. W. King, of Salem; one grandson, two sisters, Miss Lillie Curtis and Mrs. Ralph Coy, of Salem, and one brother, R. T. Curtis, also of Salem.

Funeral service will be held at Trinity Episcopal church in New Castle at 2 p. m. Wednesday. Burial will be in Grandview cemetery here, where a short funeral service will be held about 4:30 p. m. The family will meet friends at the Offutt funeral home, North Mercer st., New Castle, from 7 to 9 p. m. Tuesday.

Home-Made Bomb Hits Canton Store

CANTON, April 14.—Police today were investigating explosion of a home-made bomb early this morning in the doorway of a one-story frame building occupied by the Pucci billiard parlors and cigar store.

GREAT BRITAIN ALIGNS ARABS AGAINST ITALY

"United States of Arabia" Believed Moving Toward Fulfillment

MOVE WOULD STOP ITALY'S EXPANSION

France Says Idea Comes Naturally to London Officials

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Foreign Staff

PARIS, April 14.—A proposal for a "United States of Arabia" nationalist sources said today, is being promoted by Britain in an effort to align the Arabs against any further Italian expansion in the Red Sea region.

The dream of an Arabian empire, composed of most of the kingdoms, mandated territories and protectorates forming the Arabian peninsula, was believed by many nationalists to be moving rapidly toward fulfillment.

The Paris newspaper Le Journal, asking what was behind the movement for Arab unity, said:

Calls Plan Natural

"The idea comes naturally that England, after taking advantage of division of Arabs in the past, seems it opportune to unite them at a time when Italy had shown itself stronger than London believed."

"It is certain that if the Italians complete their triumph in Ethiopia, their activity in the Red Sea will expand."

The vision of Arab unionists, as expressed by Nationalists, was one of a loose confederation, virtually free from European domination, and with the units retaining their own rulers and governments.

Favorable signs were seen in recent events—demonstrations of greater unity among the Arabs, lessening of friction between Moslems and Christians, and a disposition on the part of European powers to withdraw to some extent from the Levant.

The proposed United States of Arabia would have a population of almost 10,000,000 and an area of more than 1,000,000 square miles, about half of it desert on the peninsula across the Red Sea from east Africa, scene of Italy's campaign of conquest.

League Attempts Direct Parley

The League of Nations attempted today through direct negotiations to determine the immediate prospect for peace between Italy and Ethiopia.

Salvador De Madariaga of Spain, president of the league's committee of 13, discussed this prospect with an Ethiopian envoy while Italy's representative traveled from Rome.

View Grave Rift

Whether the league would be able to bring any additional pressure on the belligerents for the establishment of peace perplexed

Bee Keepers Plan Saturday Meeting

A demonstration meeting for bee keepers for Columbiana, Mahoning and adjoining counties will be held at the S. H. Sittler farm, four miles southeast of Salem, at 9:20 a. m. Saturday.

W. E. Dunham, extension specialist in bee keeping, will conduct the meeting. The demonstration will show the minimum standard strength for over-wintered colonies for pollination purposes, the utilization of queenless packages to build up weakened colonies for pollination purposes, and the installation of package bees in hives.

The handling of bees in the spring and summer will be discussed. Many colonies of bees have been seriously weakened by the severe winter, with the result that heavy losses will occur unless beekeepers take steps to build up the weakened colonies.

Former Salem State Patrolman Injured

P. L. Loveland of the Geneva state highway patrol station and formerly of Salem, was in the Ashtabula City hospital today with serious injuries suffered in a collision between his motorcycle and an automobile Sunday at Ashtabula.

Loveland, who was stationed at the Salem barracks last year, received a fractured skull and leg, among other injuries, when his motorcycle and a car driven by Nicholas DePascale, 21, of Ashtabula, collided.

ISSUE IN THE MAKING

Beneath the foam and fury of discussion, a relief issue is developing. Public opinion is dividing between the existing policy of federal work relief and a revised system of locally administered direct relief. The Roosevelt administration has tried direct relief and work relief, both under federal direction. It abandoned direct relief in favor of work relief and apparently is going to defend the latter against all suggestions for revision.

Opponents take the position that the cost of work relief administered by the federal government is too high and could be reduced by returning administrative responsibility to the states. It is claimed that waste could be eliminated thereby.

Those who challenge the work relief system being defended by the Roosevelt administration are not all of one party. The issue may become partisan, however, due to the administration's defense of the WPA concept of relief.

That would be unfortunate. The United States undertook relief administration on a large scale without benefit of experience. Under the Hoover administration it stuck by the principle of local responsibility. Under the Roosevelt administration it experimented with federal responsibility. Relief is not properly a partisan question.

The issue now taking definitive form is proof that the present system falls short of being satisfactory. Previously, it was obvious that the Hoover method was unsatisfactory. The experiment will continue. Best thought on the matter seems to be inclining toward a combination of the good features of both methods—local responsibility and federal appropriations allocated to states on a basis of need.

NO APOLOGY NECESSARY

It is true that a great deal of money is made out of the fact that Americans think baseball is a grand game and are willing to pay high prices to watch contests between professional teams.

It is true that popular interest in baseball is exploited in virtually every possible way and that professional ball players come close to being big businessmen. Baseball, in short, is intensively commercialized entertainment.

That does not alter the fact that it is good entertainment. Neither does it alter the fact that it is entertainment which seems to be good for the people who support it with their money and enthusiasm. If it seems strange to Europeans, for instance, that Americans frequently respond more enthusiastically to the cry of "Play ball!" than to the exhortations of their political leaders, it must be due to a different way of thinking which Europeans cannot understand.

Americans, no doubt, are fortunate in having fewer causes to worry about such grave matters as sanctions and wars than Europeans have. But might it be that they have fewer causes to worry about those things because they prefer to do so much worrying about the prospects of their favorite ball team and the condition of a star pitcher's arm?

However that may be, the baseball season has opened. For the next five months victories and losses on the diamond will compete with victories and losses in statesmanship, politics and militarism for America's attention. Somehow, no apology seems necessary.

THE STARS SAY

For Wednesday, April 15

A rather disruptive and disintegrating influence is read from this day's astral activities. There will be much need for precaution, deliberation and vigilance, as there is omen of fraud, misrepresentation, treachery and conspiracy. Be careful in making changes and with strangers; elders may give concern. In domestic, social, artistic and affectional relations there may be much to sustain and compensate, as well as give pleasure.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of much disruption or sudden change that may not be entirely welcome or gratifying. There is hint of mischief, fraud, misrepresentation and intrigue. Be wise with strangers and not too hopeful with elders. Private affiliations will be pleasant and profitable.

A child born on this day may be pleasant and popular but difficult to understand. It should receive early training in integrity, steadiness and responsibility.

Notable nativity: George M. Yost, typewriter inventor.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, April 14—Bob Burns, the raw-boned self-styled first citizen of Van Buren, Ark., and squire of the bazooka, is another of the radio personalities to catapult from the Rudy Vallee hour to eminence. A recent poll elected him the outstanding comic broadcast find of 1935.

He was a small-time clown picking up $5 or $10 here and there around Los Angeles a year or so ago. Last spring he decided to try for the big stuff and in broken down flannel lit a shuck for New York. He got on the Vallee program because his hill-billy front tickled Vallee.

Then he went over to the Paul Whiteman show and began to climb. Today he's with the Bing Crosby outfit and receives $1,000 a week for the same drawing back country gab he used to peddle for $25 top. He also has a $1,400 a week movie contract to fill.

He shows every sign of remaining a gar-mouthed, square toed country boy. Still driving his rattle-de-bang car, occupying the same $27.50 a month walk up he rented when arriving on the coast. And clings to a hook-on tie that is something of a lulu.

The derby, or hard hat, almost ridiculed to oblivion, is touted to become the what-ho chapeau next Fall. The renaissance is due entirely to news shots of King Edward revealing the jauntiness of his favorite bowler. He wears it with such tilt and dash that a spurt was given the derby trade in the closing winter months. The season's only gray derbyist was twiggled by Lucius Beebe. He was Raymond Twyford, who not only sported a pearly dicer but a morning coat to match and caused the avenue to turn to stare in its stride along that enormous trench.

Two of the celebrity look-alikes are Frank Scully, who concocts the fun for the invalid books, and Dudley Nichols, whose movie script won the recent Academy award. Not only is their resemblance startling, but they are boon buddies in their rounds of Hollywood.

Sticklers for brevity will find something to applaud in a wander past 437 Pearl street, where a tailor window bears this lettered handiwork: "Cling—Dyng—Prag—Repg."

Those versed in the town's goings on say the most indefatigable party attendee is the glossy Conde Nast, the publisher. In turn he corals some of the most notable celebrity round-ups at his Park avenue pent house. Aside from attending three or four teas each afternoon, he is invariably host or guest daily at luncheon or dinner, a confirmed first nighter and rarely misses the premiere of a supper club. On the thirder side of 50, he's what stylists ticket a sartorial natural, an expert dancer and with it all an uncannily shrewd man of business.

Sherwood Anderson, Theodore Dreiser and other fictional disciples of despair have found inspiration visiting the Jersey marshes, where bleakness attains a windblown desolation and a blood hound melancholy that banishes all cheer. Seen in the ghostly gray of twilight, the wild, soggy and tangled stretches of seaweed are eerie in their sweep of emptiness. And there is a damp sticky aroma that reels the thought with suggestions of hobgoblins, vultures and shivery thingamajigs.

Mystery story specialists generally agree the all time high in this field has been achieved by Wilkie Collins with "The Moonstone." I have put off reading it as one so often postpones an expected treat. But marooned somewhat during the elevator strike, I salvaged it from its niche. Goodish, as Arnold Bennett might say, yet I found myself cooking an off ear to a yoder on the radio in the next room. Oppenheim's "The Great Impersonation" and Arthur Roche's "A Scrap of Paper" are two of a dozen beating it all hollow. And for sheer excitement no book touches "Everything is Thunder." And if your reading has grown tedious pick up "Huckleberry Finn" again. A grand evening, I promise you.

Journalizing in Percy Hammond's and Clark Gable's Cadiz, O., as reported in the Cadiz Republican:

"Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Birney, of Malvern, visited C. C. Dickerson, of Cadiz Township, who has been ill following a fall, over Sunday."

Bagatelles: Frank Godwin, the artist, was once a professional ball player. . . . Kathleen Norris is an expert at cryptograms. . . . Max Miller, the California author, proved the shyest of the season's visiting celebrities. . . . All his remembering years Connie Mack begins to hum shortly after he awakens. . . . Cheerio, of the radio, is among five receiving the biggest mail.

RIVERS HAVE played an important part in the world's history and in wars. The Tigris and Euphrates, creating fertile Mesopotamia, and the ancient Nile, with its rich valley, regularly coated with Nile mud, made the first civilizations possible.

Men fought through the ages about those two rivers, and today rivers still cause war. In Europe, the Rhine border may cause a repetition of the big war. In Africa, the Blue Nile, fed by Ethiopia's Lake Tana, breeds bitter hatred between England and Italy.

DEAN EDMONSON, of the University of Michigan, considers five million young citizens "condemned to loaf, to loiter, or to roam" a great national menace. In such a country as this, not half developed, five million young people, anxious to show what they can do, SHOULD be the greatest of all assets.

Something must be the matter with a country which can only suggest, "keep youth away from the labor market, in some way; make them carry out civil, education, social and religious projects." Youth does not want to do that, and does not know how. It wants to go to war.

AN AFRICAN savage who gave all his ivory tusks for a gun was found later in the bush, on his knees, praying to the gun not to shoot him. He did not know how to use it.

This country is equally ignorant about using youth and its enthusiasm. If you tell youth that it must not get started and tell men of fifty that they must retire and live on others, you will soon have a country of parasites. Who will feed them?

MRS. BEAN, auctioneer, will sell the furniture that Calvin Coolidge put in the half of a house that he rented when he married.

With Mrs. Coolidge's consent, interesting souvenirs of the late President will be auctioned off, including a small wooden cradle that the former president's father made by hand. There, as a baby, little Calvin may have lain, before he had any teeth, never dreaming that he would move to the White House and choose NOT to run.

SOME GOOD Republican should pay a high price for that cradle, and take it to the convention, for luck. Then it might go to the Smithsonian Institution, to keep George Washington's false teeth company.

Mohamedans venerate a hair from the prophet's beard, and, farther East, crowds kneel at an annual procession when an elephant passes, carrying on his back a tooth of Buddha. Relics have a strange fascination for primitive minds. Some prefer an empty bird's nest to the bird itself.

ARMY ENGINEERS, calculating the cost of harnessing the high Passamaquoddy tide, say $36,000,000 will not be enough. Diesel power is suggested to hold up the power load while the tide is low.

The British encountered that problem in planning to use the high tide of the Severn. Their idea was to store up enough extra electricity during the peak flow to keep up power between times.

Long ago, one English nobleman ruined himself with efforts to pump water back up hill after using it once. That failed. China has one of the world's greatest tides, with potential power enough to supply factories unlimited. Japan may harness that some day.

Who will utilize the waterfall, far more powerful than Niagara, now going to waste in Brazil? Japan also, perhaps.

Hemoptysis

TO MOST persons the sight of blood is a distressing experience. It sometimes causes great alarm. The red fluid may induce faintness for the onlooker and for the victim the loss of blood may produce a real fainting spell.

The presence of blood in the sputum is sometimes a reason for alarm and anxiety. Undoubtedly, this fear can be traced to the universal but erroneous belief that the presence of blood in the sputum is a sure sign of consumption. Everyone dreads this disease and any symptom that indicates its existence is disturbing. But let me assure you that the presence of blood in the sputum is not a definite sign of tuberculosis.

Of course, it is a fact that in the advanced stages the victim has this symptom. But it is not true that everyone who expectorates blood, or has blood-tinged sputum, is infected with this disease.

"Hemoptysis" is the word used by doctors to indicate the presence of blood in the sputum. This symptom may be due to a simple congestion, inflammation or broken tissues in the throat.

What Causes It

If you have ever had a severe sore throat, inflamed tonsils or bronchitis, you perhaps noticed that the increased sputum and mucus were blood tinged. This symptom is not unusual in persons having severe hacking coughs. It is due to the strain and rupture of small blood vessels in the inflamed tissues.

Another common cause for hemoptysis is faulty bridge work, which slips and irritates the gums. It may result from a loose tooth which cuts the tongue or gum. Nasal deformities, slight nose bleed from a tiny ulcer, and other inflammations of the upper air passages may result in the dripping of a small amount of blood into the mouth.

Too often, the victim of hemoptysis in his fear of tuberculosis avoids consulting a doctor. He fears he will be told that he has tuberculosis. This is unfortunate. In most instances the symptom is a trivial one and the fear is groundless.

Of course, the persistent presence of blood in the sputum must not be disregarded. It is a signal calling for an investigation.

THE SURPLUS

The advantages of a good sized surplus fund are innumerable. Such a fund safeguards the savings accounts in every way. It provides a means of meeting such losses as may occur without drawing either on the accumulated capital or the current earnings. Moreover these funds are not kept idle; they are loaned out along with other funds and the income which they produce increases the total earnings of the institution. The income from a fund of a million and three-quarters is a considerable sum. The income from these surplus funds has been a substantial help to this institution in maintaining its dividend rate of three per cent, tax free, on savings accounts.

"DAUGHTERS OF VENUS"

CHAPTER XXX

"I didn't hear you come in last night," Juliet said at breakfast.

"Neither did Juliet know that Katie had worn her evening wrap and the peach-colored gown."

"I was equally unaware that Katie had slipped in shortly before dawn and had not yet been asleep."

"I was careful not to wake you," answered Katie. "I spent the evening with a friend."

"The inadequate explanation was sufficient because Juliet's mind was preoccupied with the fact that Katie Schmidt and her mother were planning to leave the house running as smoothly as you can," Juliet told her. "I'm too busy to stay home much these days."

"Yes, Miss Juliet," said Katie. "Gottlieb had amazed Juliet by the thoroughness with which he had gone into the manufacturing proposition with McSpadden. His mind had proved to be a suction pump extracting facts and figures and the little chemist's mind was empty."

"The peculiar thing about Gottlieb was that he never tired."

"His plump little body did not exhaust him as an insatiable sponge stuffing himself with information."

"He went on for a week before he thought of departing for New York. One evening had sufficed to consume McSpadden's stock of information."

"Gottlieb visited other chemists, manufacturing plants, importers, soap factories, bottle and package makers, warehouses. He flew to San Francisco and back in a day, to talk to an authority on landin, the bland oil extracted from sheep's wool. He drew up a tentative contract with the head of the Avocado Growers' Association."

"Avocados, recently, had become popular in the West as a base for face creams. By now he was estimating everything by the ton. Juliet gave up trying to keep pace with him."

"Don't you worry," he assured her. "Just leave everything to me." Juliet's mind kept stretching and stretching but could not equal his enormous capacity for storing facts and figures. When he had crammed himself full, he spent eighteen hours with a statistician reducing his information to charts and tables. Then he took off in an airplane for New York with brief cases bulging.

"This thing is so big we may establish branches all over Europe," he told her at the airport.

Sitting in command of the Beauty institute taxed Juliet's energies almost to exhaustion.

"The job was bigger than she imagined. Every difficulty in every department eventually reached her. She was an angry hornet that had to be dealt with."

"It was incredible that so many manicurists could catch influenza, so many customers swear they had paid when they hadn't, so many elevator operators and electricians and plumbers and window washers and janitors do the wrong thing when they were paid to do the right thing."

"Meanwhile Juliet's row of little dancing slippers gathered dust and tarnish in their neat rack."

The third assistant bookkeeper absconded with two hundred and forty-five dollars; the fatty calf of a haughty matron was bitten by a Pekinese in the steam room; a bleached head being dyed auburn emerged a vivid orange. O'Hara went on a bat for three days and couldn't be found. The money poured in and the money poured out.

McSpadden's wife created a scene with her spouse in the basement, and Von Guerdon began sending Juliet orchids daily.

On the strength of the brilliant prospect Juliet bought a tan-colored coupe for herself and began planning to build a house with a patio.

O'Hara came into her office shame-faced.

"I'm sorry as can be," he said. "What was the matter?" she asked him, noticing the shadows under his eyes. "Sick again?"

"No. Just worthless. I guess. Seems to be in the blood. Sorry I let you down."

"Don't worry yourself about me," said Juliet. "You let yourself down."

It was embarrassing to see a grown man gulping like a boy.

"I'm a dog, Juliet," he said lamely.

Had he been a stronger character, Juliet might have blamed him more. Standing there with that miserable look on his face he did something to her heart. She could have kissed him, caressed him, and thought nothing of it. This kind of detached tenderness was not at all upsetting.

"You'll be all right, Pal," she said brightly. "Everybody's foot slips sometimes. I'd go on a binge myself if I dared."

"But you don't understand—" "If you start confessing I'll scream," she said cheerfully. "Take that hairshirt off and go back to your own office."

"I thought I'd be washed up when I got back. Serve me right if you had fired me."

"Forget it. I'm worried about Gottlieb, not you. He has been deadlocked with those New Yorkers for two weeks. His last letters weren't too optimistic. You don't think the deal could possibly fall through, do you?"

O'Hara got his mind off himself.

"Not a chance, Juliet. Those birds are tough, but Gottlieb will come away with their tail feathers."

Juliet was getting so she could not think about the deal without shivering. One hundred thousand dollars, her share, almost made her dizzy.

"It's not the money I worry about," she told O'Hara. "It's the idea that we may bungle it after all. I'm afraid of losing something I haven't got. Does it ever seem to you that this whole thing is just a dream?"

Her eyes widened and there was a little aching sensation in her temples, for Juliet was continuously restless and short on sleep these days. Under pressure, she noticed she ate less than usual.

"This whole place has always been like a nightmare to me," O'Hara said morosely. "I'd like to be married to you and live on an Iowa farm. Or doing hula dances in the South Seas. But don't worry—I'm not proposing. I'm going down to my office and plunge up to my neck in work."

Such was his sincere intention, but an apparition, prevented him. An eerie and unearthly Madame Hubert opened the door and walked into Juliet's office.

But it was not the Madame Hubert they knew. It was someone else, a parody, a stranger, an optical illusion....

An actual ghost could have been no more startling to Juliet and O'Hara.

"Good Lord!" he gasped. "What have you done to yourself, Madame?"

Juliet got up from her desk but did not approach the bewildering spectacle.

"Why, Madame, you look—you look—"

Something miraculous had happened to Madame Hubert's face. It was no longer brown and withered, but had a smooth and waxy texture like painted artificial fruit. The folds and hollows and creases and wrinkles had disappeared.

Around the eyes the skin had a tight, drawn-back look; a small and perfect nose stood where the hawk's beak had been.

The scrawny throat was now a slender column of alabaster arising from a youthful dress of startling magenta. An absurd hat perched rakishly upon hair as waved and platinumed as Katie Schmidt's.

Juliet's eyes flew to the hands. They were still like claws, but smooth and white and glazed, terminating in ruby-lacquered nails.

Very slowly Madame Hubert revolved before their eyes like a mannequin exhibiting a gown, and they saw her back was military straight as though she were held taut by invisible steel wires.

"Now you witness me as I really am, my dears," she said in a voice that plastic surgery had not been able to improve. "The butterfly is out of the chrysalis."

Juliet struggled to find something to say.

"It's like being born anew, isn't it?"

The Madame's cruelly rouged lips grimaced.

"It's better than that," she croaked. "It's like rising from the tomb."

"Good Lord," blurted O'Hara. "It's ghastly!"

She pivoted swiftly towards him on her high jeweled heels.

"Pardon!"

"I mean it's uncanny," muttered

O'Hara. "I've never seen anything like it in my life."

It was impossible to tell whether Madame Hubert flushed under the enamel of her face, but her eyes blazed and the marcelled head flew erect.

"Must you say such horrible things! I've the right to make the most of myself. Beauty is woman's birthright and I decided to claim it. Am I to be met with sneers?"

"The change is so sensational!" cried Juliet. "You're perfectly marvelous."

"But of course I am!" shot back the Madame. "I was always marvelous, but I neglected myself for the business. It made other women feel beautiful just to look at me. That was my success secret. But such days have passed."

"Of course they have," said Juliet, moved by the strangest pity that ever disturbed her heart.

"How old would you say I appear?"

Juliet considered her thoughtfully.

"A very young thirty—at the outside."

Madame Hubert turned to O'Hara. "And you?"

A trace of his old grin came back to O'Hara's lips.

"You've got me so groggy, Madame, I could hardly say. About thirty I guess. But you can't expect to dawn on people like this all of a sudden and not bowl them over. You're certainly gorgeous all right—a regular knock-out."

His words, carelessly spoken, fell like gentle rain on her thirsty soul. She went to him and grasped the lapel of his coat.

"Maybe a heart-breaker, eh?" she asked, the creaking caricature of an ingenue.

"Oh, absolutely," he assured her generously. "My heart is smashed to smithereens already and heaven knows what you will do to Von Guerdon."

The antiquated shoulders shrugged gaily.

"Von Guerdon knows all about my rejuvenation. I am his greatest triumph. The man is a great artist. Is your heart really in smithereens, O'Hara?"

O'Hara, over Madame Hubert's head, grimaced helplessly at Juliet. More than anything else he wanted to escape out of this office.

"Sure, I'm in a state of total collapse," he said desperately. "It's wonderful to see you rejuvenated like this. But I suppose you want Juliet to tell you how the business is going."

"Business, pough! I have decided to forget business for the present. Build it up sky-high, my children and pile money for the firm in the bank. But, by the way, Juliet darling—business is good, is it not?"

"Marvelous. And we are expecting to sign a contract with the chain stores any day—"

"Good. And how have you been treating my boy?" The glazed hand with the ruby-lacquered nails rested caressingly on O'Hara's arm. "Is he still in love with you?"

"Heaven no!" smiled Juliet.

Again the artificial smile appeared on Madame Hubert's scarlet mouth.

"I wouldn't like it if O'Hara continued to love you," she said throatily. "After all, I discovered him didn't I. O'Hara? Maybe he remembers he owes a little something to Madame Hubert."

"That's quite right," O'Hara scowled shortly. "How can I ever forget it?"

"Oh, touchy, eh? Is that nice? After I made myself beautiful so that you won't be ashamed of me? Naughty boy!"

"That's swell," said O'Hara rather aimlessly. "Well, I've got to get back to work."

But Madame Hubert had maneuvered herself between him and the door.

"To work, no! There is too much work in this world. Other things are better. I'm going to take you to lunch with me—to the Ambassador. We're going to lunch and we will dance too!"

Constitution, like wireless telepathy flew from O'Hara to Juliet. It was inconceivably grotesque.

Juliet—watching O'Hara, wondered what he would do—what he would say.

She hoped for his own sake he would flatly refuse. And then she remembered the gratitude he owed Madame Hubert. It was this eerie little woman who had picked him up sick and virtually in the gutter, and set him on his feet.

O'Hara's voice, when he spoke was halting but resolute.

"I shall be honored, Madame, to take you to lunch."

Irish beauty and a sparkling personality won for Miss Patsy Donovan, dancer and actress, the title of "All-American Girl" at the annual contest of Hollywood Screen Dancers' guild in Los Angeles.

"I tried other brands but they weren't so good, so I tried Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and it is just wonderful. It makes delicious muffins, too," Miss Agnes Hanson, 450 N. Cicero Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, and gently exercises and cleanses the system. It is often more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables, as it does not break down within the body. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this natural food pleasanter than patent medicines? Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. If not relieved, see your doctor.

Sold by all grocers. ALL-BRAN is much more effective than part-bran products. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Seed Corn Should Be Tested, Report

LISBON, April 14.—While the seed corn situation in Columbiana county may not be as serious as in some counties, yet the situation is such that the farmers need to carefully test their corn before planting, according to a statement made by County Agent Floyd Lower.

Reports which have been received at the county extension office from tests which have already been made in the county indicate that 40 to 50 per cent of all seed corn will not grow, Lower said. Heavy losses will occur in poor standards unless the growers are careful to make germination tests.

The severe winter, together with the high moisture content in most corn last fall, is responsible for the poor germination. The supply of seed corn is quite limited. A number of persons who have corn for sale, which tests have shown will grow, have listed their extra corn at the county agent's office, and others who have extra seed corn have been invited to do likewise. Persons in need of seed are making inquiry at the extension office almost daily, Mr. Lower says.

Pittsburgh Plane Radio Beam Tested

(By Associated Press) PITTSBURGH, April 14.—The men investigating the wreck of the air transport Sun Racer which cost 12 lives checked over conflicting testimony about Pittsburgh's radio beams today while arranging to complete their inquiry.

Paul Richter, vice president in charge of operations of Transcontinental and Western airlines, testified at a session last night two pilots had complained about a "cone of silence" some distance from the Pittsburgh airport.

The cone of silence is a technical term for the dead center of the radio guide beacon and indicates to the pilot he is over the airport.

Plane Crash Toll Mounts To Twelve

UNIONTOWN, Pa., April 14.—The crash of the Luxury Air transport, Sun Racer, a week ago today, claimed as its 12th victim C. G. Challinor, the only man to escape immediate death in the Chestnut Ridge disaster.

The 42-year-old Cleveland engineering expert died in a hospital last night after bravely submitting to two operations for amputation of part of his left leg.

Both his ankles were broken when the big liner tore through the brush on a fog-shrouded mountain. He had to lie in the cold rain more than six hours before he could be taken to the hospital.

Doctors reported today Mrs. Hilda Ellenstein of Newark, N. J., who also suffered fractures of both legs, showed constant improvement.

The only other survivor, Nellie Granger, hostess of the Sun Racer, was denied visitors when a fever developed.

F. D. R. FAVORS LIMIT ON WORK

President Launches Campaign With Outline Of Proposals

(By Associated Press) BALTIMORE, April 14.—Offering the suggestion that the active working years of every American breadwinner be limited to 47, President Roosevelt had placed before the nation today a broad outline of the new deal's position on the major problem of unemployment.

Amid the cheers of supporters who had gathered for a Democratic rally after an old-time torchlight parade last night, Mr. Roosevelt called on youth to be "social pioneers" and help "bring under control the forces of modern society."

Large Scale Work

Devoting most of his address to a discussion of continuing large-scale unemployment, the President promised that it would be attacked "from every conceivable angle." But, it was his suggestion for limits on the wage-earning life span that aroused much discussion and speculation today.

Raising the question whether it is not "possible and right to limit the active working ages at both ends," Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Work out for yourselves what would happen if all the boys and all the girls of 14 and 15 and 16 and 17 who are now working in industry found it possible to stay in school until they were at least 18 years old. How many jobs would that give to the young people of the nation who have graduated from high school and from college? x x x

"In the same way, ask yourselves how many jobs would be created if the great majority of people who are now over 65—to take a figure at random—were in a position to retire in security for the balance of their days on earth."

Mr. Roosevelt did not indicate whether the administration is planning specific proposals along these lines, beyond the social security and other programs already enacted.

Old Canals, All Now Obsolete, Marked Era In Ohio Business

History of Sandy and Beaver, An Expensive Project Never Used, Is Recalled

Looking back about 100 years, a person finds himself in one of the most interesting periods of Ohio history. It was a period when business men were already beginning to look about them, striving to break into new markets, and farmers were seeking better markets where they might sell their produce for cash at a profit instead of having to barter for other goods in their own vicinity.

Canal Idea Broached
The idea of building a canal system for the purpose of transporting goods from one place to another originated with General George Washington; and when conditions finally reached the point where canals might become a reality, conditions were found to be propitious for the undertaking, so that during the early part of 1800, canals sprang into existence.

This digging and building continued until it was found that Ohio boasted some 868 miles of canals, traversing the state from north to south and from east to west.

It was a picturesque sight to see a canal boat coming through the fog and mist which rose from the water, while two or three horses trudged slowly along the towpath, dragging a rope about 75 feet long which was tied to the canal boat.

The boats themselves were interestingly built as suited the builder's fancy. Some were built to resemble a house; others resembled a passenger coach, while still others were ingeniously built to resemble a pirate boat. Now and then one would hear a shout from the young lad who rode one of the horses or mules. Sometimes the boy rode side saddle; at other times he would ride regular fashion.

Pullman's of Canal
Canal packets, after described as the Pullman of canal boats, were found in every canal in Ohio. They resembled the passenger coach of our own day, for they had many windows. They also boasted a promenade deck where people might sit and enjoy the scenery until they approached a low bridge, whereon the captain's shout of "Low bridge!" would send everyone scuttling below. These packets could accommodate from 50 to 75 passengers and they ran on a regular schedule, as they often had to make connections with the lumbering stage coaches of the day.

A packet served as a diner, sleeper, smoker, parlor car, baggage car, and a U. S. mail coach; mail being carried on all packets; and all these various activities were conducted in a boat 75 feet long, 14 feet wide and 12 feet deep above the water line. There were two captains to each packet, one, the owner of the canal, and the other, a government official who had charge of the mail. The latter also had jurisdiction over the entire boat as long as any mail remained aboard.

Proves Fiasco
One of the most interesting, although it proved to be the greatest fiasco, was the Sandy and Beaver Canal. In December 1827, the State of Ohio let contracts for the construction of this canal. It was to extend from Smith's Ferry on the Ohio river, 40 miles below Pittsburgh, west to Bolivar, Ohio, near Zoar to connect with the Ohio and Erie canal which was already making great progress in handling freight and carrying passengers.

This legislation passed, certificates of stock were issued and sold to private individuals. Certificates for the amount of $10 are still in existence throughout Columbiana county. The aggregate loss to the stockholders on this canal is said to be $2,000,000. There are still many claimants asking to recover the money they lost in this venture.

The city of Canton, invested almost $20,000 to build a branch of the Sandy and Beaver canal just 12 miles away, which proved to be another fiasco. It was never completed. The route of this canal led through a small town in Columbiana county known as Hanover or Hanoverton, but they encountered insurmountable difficulties and had to abandon the project.

12-Year Job
But to return to the Sandy and Beaver canal—it was begun in 1834 and not completed until 1846—twelve years later. By that time, the railroads had begun to supersede the canal boats, so it was never used. Other canal boats had carried locomotive parts to remote places. These were assembled and soon proved to be the Frankenstein which spelled doom for the canal.

Railroads. After having gained a foothold, would often buy up the canals and abandon the equipment so as to leave the field clear for themselves. Only one boat ever made the trip, and that was done only in order that the contractors might be able to collect their money for labor and equipment.

The canal was 73 miles long. It was an extremely expensive undertaking, as the route led through the hilly country of Columbiana county. Not wishing to cut a deep channel through these hills, the engineers had to dig two tunnels through the rock. This work progressed day in and day out for 24 hours a day. The $2,000,000 spent for building this canal does not include the cost of digging these two tunnels.

Cost Never Known
The cost of these was never known. There are only two sets of tunnels in all the canal systems of the United States. The Sandy and Beaver had one, and the Union canal in the East had the other. The tunnels of the Sandy and Beaver canal consisted of one that was almost a mile in length and another that was only about a quarter of a mile long. They were made of arched stone and countryside; and the circuses comprised many of the attractions we have today—lions, tigers, bears, giraffes, elephants and horses, not to mention the clowns, the bareback riders, and the trapeze artists.

2,000 at Each Show
As many as 2,000 tickets were sold for each performance, both afternoon and evening. Hitching posts and watering troughs were at a premium at those times.

The circuses boats were specially constructed, being made in two sections and chained together so that they could be loaded on railroad cars that were run into the canal and boats loaded on flat cars and anchored down to take them over a portage or incline on one side and down grade on the other side of some large hill, to be floated off the car and chained together again.

However, this could not be done at Hanover on account of the tunnels; so the actors, one and all, rather than risk their lives in the tunnels, packed their carpet bags and proceeded to trudge up hill and down dale toward Hanover. They never expected to see the boats or the animals again, but they had not reckoned on the genius of E. L. Struchm, an expert boatman, who knew his tunnels, and when they arrived at the other end of the tunnels, there before their eyes emerged triumphantly the canal boat with all the animals intact.

Locks Described
Each of the locks was about 100 feet long, so it may readily be seen that locks alone took up a couple of miles. For those unfamiliar with the locks, the following description is given:

A lock consisted of four gates—two at the upper level and two at the lower level. The average lock was 100 feet long, 16 feet wide, and the depth varied from 24 inches.

One end was called the heel end of the gate. It rested on the heel plate. This plate was fastened in the mitre ledge in the stone work of the canal, holding the gate in place, and acting as a hinge when the gate was swung open. The center of the gate was called the toe end of the gate. This end rested against the mitre ledge. The gates were mired and bevelled to put upstream in order to hold back the water pressure. The long team on the gate was called the balance beam, which often had a box fastened to the end. This box was weighted with stone to prevent the toe end of the gate from dragging on the bottom.

In each of these gates near the bottom was a small paddle or gate. It was made of boiler plate, and was about 18 inches by 24 inches. It opened by means of a lever or wheel with a rod attached to it. When these paddles were opened, the water was able to flow freely into the lock or out of it, maintaining the desired level for the boat to proceed on its journey.

At the upper end of every lock was a race way with a dam constructed across its bed to hold the water to the desired level and also to receive the excess water, so that it would not flood the land and break the banks of the canal. There were tow snubbing posts beside each lock, to which the boats could be tied when necessary.

"Winding a Boat"
To turn one of these boats around was no mean feat. It was known as "winding a boat" in canal parlance. First it was necessary to get to a very wide place in the canal or basin. The boat was then tied to a snubbing post from the bow end, the hawser line or tow line was put to the stern end, and the line was then hooked to the single tree on the harness of a mule or horse. It was the ingenuity of the man at the stick or tiller that counted. Many women could perform this feat as well as, if not better than, some men.

On either side of the boat was the "Night Hawker," or beacon light. It hung in a glass-enclosed box, the back of the box being painted white to act as a reflector. Simple as these lights were, they served their purpose, for collisions were unknown. Even if the boat had sprung a leak, there was no danger for the passengers, for the boat could be swung to the heel side or the towpath, and the passengers could be rescued. Or, if the boat had sunk in mid-stream, the passengers could easily have paddled ashore, for the water was no more than four and one-half feet deep. Practically all canal boats operated seven days a week. A few owners refused to break the Sabbath and operated only six days. These soon became known as "Sunday Boats." Practically every passenger enjoyed the distinction of having one of the canal boats named for him.

Four Cents a Mile
One could ride on the canal packets for only four cents a mile. This included bed, meals and transportation until the racketeers came along and spoiled everything. Their game was to board the boat as mealtime approached, thoughtfully neglecting to mention their destination. They would then sit down to the table with the rest of the passengers, dispose of a hearty meal, toss the captain five or 10 cents to pay for the mile or two they had ridden, and disembark, much to the captain's disgust. Naturally, this state of affairs could not be allowed to continue, and the time came when the captains of the packets drew up a new schedule of fares: Dinner, 35c; supper, 25c; breakfast varied in cost; the bed was a mere shilling or 12½c per night.

The old canal, with its locks, aqueducts, and covered bridges, is rapidly going to decay. Landslides have closed up parts of the tunnels, and the entrances can hardly be seen. The canal bed is overgrown with cat-tails and undergrowth. The frogs and fish have all left for better streams; but here and there is still to be found an octogenarian who knew it in its prime, whose eyes will light up as he talks about "the good old days."

The Sandy and Beaver passed through Stark, Carroll and Columbiana counties. Only six miles of this canal were used to any extent, those being the six miles adjoining the Ohio canal.

All Obsolete Now
The canals are now all obsolete, but their construction was justified by the results that followed their completion, if they are credited with the direct result. Ohio soon became the third state in population, and its canal system was the most extensive in the world. The canals stood a century of abuse and misuse. A total of $21,500,000 worth of canal terminals was given away by various general assemblies.

The canals still furnish to the state the only source of income that is not collected by either direct or indirect taxation. The revenue produced by the department of public works from July 1, 1920, to Dec. 31, 1930, was $3,795,092.03.

Of the 813 miles of canal system in the state, only 178 miles of the canal system have water in them. The state still owns 690 miles of the original 813 miles.

The superintendent has authority to fix and collect rentals and tolls. All the revenue derived from land leases, water leases, manufacturing site leases, pipe leases, oil royalties, agricultural leases, (dry bed) telephone line leases, railroad leases, and railroad bridge crossing leases helps to bring about these figures in dollars and cents.

There is no canal boat in operation on any of the canals in Ohio.

Capacity Crowds Witness Major League Baseball Openers

Expect Interesting Race In American League; Cubs, Cards National Favorites

Fair Weather Predictions In All Cities May Boost Attendance At National League's Four Contests To Around 115,000

NEW YORK, April 14.—The historic days of preparation at the end of the National League baseball season start playing for keeps today.

Fair weather predictions in all cities were expected to boost the attendance at the four games to around 115,000.

The schedule follows: Boston at Philadelphia; Pittsburgh at Cincinnati; Chicago at St. Louis; and Brooklyn at New York.

Though the Brooklyn-New York game at the Polo grounds was attracting the greatest crowd 55,000 the pitcher's battle between Lonnie Warneke and Dizzy Dean in St. Louis was the league's most exciting game.

Earnshaw to Pitch Casey Stengel refused to change his early decision to pitch Big George Earnshaw instead of Van Lingle Mungo against the Giants, while Manager Bill Terry stuck to Hal Schumacher as his choice.

In the other game, the Phillies were counting on Curt Davis, their ace, to outpitch the veteran Danny MacFayden of the Boston Bees.

Interest was centering on the St. Louis game not only because these two teams are favored to win the pennant, but because the Cubs won the 1935 Cards in the last series of the season, and Warneke, pitching one of the greatest games of his career, played an important part in that series.

CHICAGO, April 14.—A dynamic charged American league race gets the starting gun today.

Eight clubs go away on a grueling, 154-game stretch which looms as one of the most interesting flag chases in years. Packed with possibilities and questions to be answered, the 1936 junior circuit campaign may provide a hot battle in which pennant hopes, which blossomed so prettily this spring, may be blasted sky high before the halfway post is reached.

Eighty thousand fans may attend the four openers if the weather is favorable.

CANTON ENTERS BASEBALL LOOP

Business Men Post Necessary Forfeit For Membership

CANTON, April 14.—Elmer Daily, president of the Middle Atlantic league, gathered an eighth club into the fold today and hurried preparations for the opening of the league season May 6.

Daily said a group of Canton business men had posted the necessary $900 forfeit fee with him for a Canton representative in the loop. Other clubs in the league are Dayton, Akron, Portsmouth and Zanesville and Johnstown, Pa., and Huntington and Charleston, W. Va.

"Canton will operate under an arrangement whereby the Boston Red Sox of the American league will furnish players," Daily said.

"Boston, however, has no money in the club at this time. The forfeit fee was raised today in about four hours."

The Canton team will take the place in the league formerly occupied by Beckley, W. Va., dropped because of its unfavorable location in comparison with other Middle Atlantic teams.

Daily said he did not believe a manager for the Canton team would be named until later in the week. The Canton backers are expected to elect officers and decide on a plan of action today.

Association Starts Again

CHICAGO, April 14.—All American association clubs took up today where they left off in Sunday's tilt. Minneapolis, which started the season by trimming Toledo, resumed warfare with the Mudhens, Columbus, victorious over St. Paul Sunday, met the Saints on the Red Birds home lot.

Kansas City and Indianapolis met again at Indianapolis, with a chance to settle in some measure the 13-inning 2-2 tie they played on Easter day. The fourth game pitted the Louisville Colonels against the Milwaukee Brewers at Louisville. The Colonels won Sunday's encounter.

Columbus Golfer Wins First Meet

SPRINGFIELD, April 14.—A sub-par 71 coupled with a deducted four-stroke handicap won for Maury White, Columbus Brookside course pro, the year's opening golf tournament of the Central Ohio Professionals' association yesterday.

White's net was 67. Oscar Willoewit, Dayton McGregor pro, placed second in a field of 22 by posting a 72-3169.

McQUIRE LOOP SEASON OPENS

Six Grammar Schools To Begin Softball Play Saturday

Softball teams in Salem's six grammar schools today prepared for another season with the announcement by Joe Kelley, manager of the World War Memorial building, that the "Mickey McGuire" league will open play Saturday morning on the lot adjoining Reilly stadium.

The fans will see an array of high priced talent. Detroit, seeking a third straight flag, presents Al Simmons in centerfield.

If the $75,000 outfielder hits, the Tigers may make the race a breeze. The big question is whether owner Tom Yawkey's check book paved the way for a pennant for his Red Sox.

The league season will continue until Saturday, May 16, with each team meeting every other aggregation in the loop before the campaign ends. Three games will be played each Saturday.

In the opening day's contests the champion, Columbia team meets McKinley at 9, Reilly faces Fourth St. at 9:45, and Prospect engages St. Paul's at 10:30.

Tenpin Tourney Entries Coming In Rather Slowly

Deadline For Entries Is Midnight, Wednesday; Tournament To Open Next Week

Despite the fact that bowling interest reached a new peak in Salem this year, entries in the handicap tenpin tournament, which opens April 21, are coming in rather slowly.

John Carpenter, secretary of the city bowling association, revealed today.

Carpenter, who has spent much of his time in efforts to make the tournament a success, said that unless a large number of entries are turned in before the deadline of midnight Wednesday only about one-half of the expected keggers will compete in the events.

Although bowlers and teams entering the tourney must have their blanks in by the deadline, it is not necessary to pay the entry fee of 50 cents for one event or $1.50 for all of the events until midnight Saturday, Carpenter said.

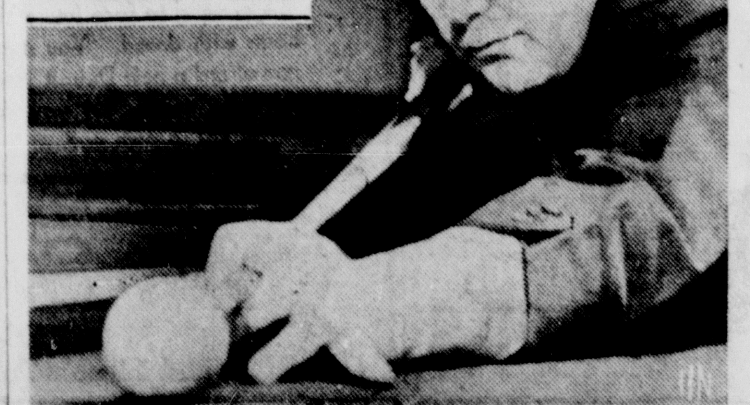

Open To All Bowlers
The tournament is scheduled to get under way one week from today at the Grate Recreation and Masonic temple alleys. It is open to all bowlers in Salem and vicinity, regardless of whether they have or have not bowled in city league competition.

Prizes will be awarded for first, second and third places in each of the divisions, five-man, doubles, singles and all-events. It is only necessary to enter one division of the tourney, but to be eligible for a share of the prize money in the all-events class, bowlers must compete in the five-man doubles and singles.

Handicaps for regular league bowlers will be two-thirds of the difference between their official average of April 17 and 20, the "scratch" score of the tournament.

Baseball Meeting Scheduled Tonight

Baseball enthusiasts, members of last year's Salem Merchants diamond team and other interested persons will meet at the Memorial building at 7:30 tonight to decide whether Salem will enter a club in the Columbiana County Baseball league this season.

The meeting will be presided over by James Reaney, manager of last year's Merchants' club, and Merle Halverstad and Frank Scullion, who will pilot the team this year, if it is decided to enter the league.

Theater Attractions

Bette Davis and Franchot Tone in "Dangerous" showing at the State tonight and tomorrow.

For several years, Bette Davis was mentioned as a possible winner of the Motion Pictures Art and Sciences academy award. Each time she was beaten by a narrow margin. When the board met this year she finally won the award for 1935 for her acting in the picture, "Dangerous," which will be presented tonight and tomorrow at the State theater.

A Fascinating Woman

"Dangerous" is the story of a brilliant actress who is dangerous because of her fascination to men. She is loved by many but loves only her career, and sacrifices everything and everybody to her ambitions.

Franchot Tone has the male lead. Others in the cast are Margaret Lindsay, Dick Foran, Alison Skipworth and John Eldredge. Rescued from the gutter by a young architect, Franchot Tone, Miss Davis works her fatal fascination on him to the point where he neglects his profession and his fiancée, Margaret Lindsay. He tries desperately to get her to marry him, not knowing that she is already married to a man of wealth whom she has ruined.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 14.—The 36th renewal of the American Bowling Congress tournament will be ended here this evening when final games in the singles and two man event are rolled.

Indianapolis, the host city, also became the home of the world's champion team last night when competition closed in the five man event with the falls city Hi Bru of Indianapolis on top with 3,089.

INDIANS MEET TIGERS TODAY

Odell Hale Forced to Sit On Bench After Injury To Foot

CLEVELAND, April 14.—The Cleveland Indians face the world champion Detroit Tigers in the opening game here today with Odell Hale, slugging third baseman, sitting on the bench.

Hale fouled a ball against the instep of his right foot during the exhibition game with the New York Giants Sunday. He was barely able to get to the ball park yesterday for treatment by Lefty Weisman, the club trainer.

An X-ray showed that no bones were broken, but Dr. Edward B. Castle, the team physician, said there was only the slimmest chance that Hale would be able to play today. He said Hale probably would be forced to rest for two or three days.

The Indians went through their last pre-season workout at League park yesterday. The Tigers also had a workout there.

Mel Harder is scheduled to pitch for the Indians with Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe on the mound for the champions.

Manager Steve O'Neill of the Indians said he would use Lou Berger in the infield to take Hale's place. A sellout crowd of 25,000 is expected for the game.

New Call For CCC Recruits Awaited

A third call this month for recruits for CCC camps is expected to be received at the PERA office here within a few days, it was announced by Miss Mary Lee Boyle, case supervisor.

Forty young men from Columbiana county who went to the Youngstown armory for final examination and enlistment Monday were accepted.

Wallace E. King of the Veterans bureau also has been informed to enlist veterans for camp service.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—A recent survey by Yale authorities shows that Yale's youngest graduate received his sheepskin at the age of 15 years and 26 days. He was Charles Chauncey, who was graduated in 1792.

CHAUFFEURS NEED Special License

Peter G. Polas, of Youngstown, an inspector for the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, has informed John H. Irwin, county auditor, that a campaign will be launched at once to ascertain names of "chauffeurs" who have not obtained certificates from the Columbus department.

Polas is a department inspector for a district comprising Columbiana, Mahoning and Trumbull counties.

PLACERVILLE, Calif.—Frank Coster, of Portuguese origin, who has just celebrated his 100th birthday, attributes his longevity to the same food favored by his father, who died at 127 years—garlic and onions.

MOTOR GROUP QUILTS CHAMBER

Auto Manufacturers Believed Not Satisfied With Support

By J. R. BRACKETT, Associated Press Staff Writer
WASHINGTON, April 14.—The automobile manufacturers association, trade organization of the giant motor industry, has resigned from the chamber of commerce of the United States.

Except to confirm the "walk out," neither business group would comment today, but informed business circles said the motor manufacturers were not satisfied with the chamber's support of federal bus and truck legislation.

The chamber, the largest business association in the nation, is negotiating with the automobile manufacturers in an attempt to close the breach. Meanwhile several individual manufacturers maintain their membership in the chamber.

The dispute began at the chamber's convention a year ago when a resolution was passed calling for establishment of federal regulation of all forms of interstate transportation without further delay.

The automobile group was said to feel this resolution was dictated by railroad interests, and assertions were made at the time that the committee which put forth the declaration was "packed" by railroads.

The auto group's resignation is the second time within recent months that the chamber has encountered some internal dissent.

When the organization conducted a referendum among its members recently on trends of government legislation, some local chambers resigned from the central body, protesting that the referendum was so phrased as to produce a vote indicating business was hostile to the new deal.

19th District Sees Votes For Landon

(By Associated Press)
YOUNGSTOWN, April 14.—If the 19th congressional district's "favorite son" candidates for delegate to the Republican national convention are elected, they will vote for Alf M. Landon for president on the second ballot, party leaders said here today following a meeting of the delegate candidates at Warren last night.

The Republican delegate and alternate candidates on the Robert Taft slate met behind closed doors. Later they announced:

"Delegates and alternates of the district feel that Governor Landon is a strong candidate in this district."

Party leaders said informally the decision had been made to vote for Landon on the second ballot, if the Taft slate is elected.

Another set of delegate candidates is pledged to Senator Borah.

The 19th district includes Mahoning, Trumbull, and Ashtabula counties.

Wife and Children Rescued From Fire

CLEVELAND, April 14.—Glenn Lance rescued his wife and two children last night when fire cut off escape from the second floor of their house where they were sleeping.

Lance climbed from the second floor porch into the branches of a tree and then, one at a time, took his wife and the children from the porch to the ground.

Two other women and two more children were rescued from the house with ladders.

"United States of Arabia" Believed Moving Toward Fulfillment

European statesmen in view of the grave rift which appeared to be developing between France and Great Britain.

The British sought to make settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war the advance guard in a campaign for the establishment of a new European security system while the French were equally determined to make settlement of the Rhineland crisis with Germany No. 1 on the list of things which must be done in Europe.

Diplomatic sources in Paris said France has reached the point where she must choose either Italy or Great Britain as her best friend.

Stronger Measures

Authoritative sources in London said a session of the League of Nations sanctions committee, to consider stronger measures against Italy, is to be considered inevitable.

With little apparent attention to any of these various plans for circumventing her military prowess, Italy moved ahead in Ethiopia, tightening her grip on the whole northern area of that country while her airplanes spread terror in the interior.

Italian press reports said Dessale, long the general headquarters of the Ethiopian army, had fallen to an advance guard of Fascist troops.

A new development in the tangled situation was reported by Nationalist sources in Paris which said Great Britain was promoting plans for a "United States of Arabia" to solidify the Arabs against further expansion of Italian power in the Red sea region.

MURDER PROBE SUSPECT FREED

Detectives, Investigating Bathing Slaying, Had Questioned Artist

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, April 14.—A Greenwich village artist was eliminated from the baffling Nancy Evans Titterton murder case today after police determined he was not the tall, blond man seen near the strangled author's apartment.

Herman W. Horstmann, 26, was questioned after he was arrested on a charge of violating the Sullivan gun carrying law, but Assistant Inspector John A. Lyons said: "He is out of the picture completely and has no bearing on the case whatever."

Passed Bad Checks
Horstmann has light brown hair. A midtown modiste had told police a tall, blond man had given her two worthless checks, and neighbors of Mrs. Titterton in exclusive Beekman place had reported a man of similar appearance in the vicinity.

Officers also expressed little interest in a former convict whose name was supplied by Quincy, Mass., police as a possible suspect.

Lieut. George W. Fallon of Quincy advised New York authorities the man had attacked a woman and left her in a bathtub there in 1927, and that he committed a similar crime in Auburn, N. Y.

While detectives pushed a wide search for strangers seen at various times in Beekman place, police scientists worked in their laboratories for the fourth day examining articles found in the Titterton apartment.

Inspector Lyons said, however, he had heard nothing of a report that three blond hairs had been discovered on a bedspread.

Policeman Relieved Of Duty In Probe

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, April 14.—County Prosecutor Frank T. Cullitan called more witnesses today as the grand jury studied records showing that Police Captain Louis J. Cadek accumulated savings of $109,000, part of which was used to buy 330 cemetery lots.

Cullitan said Cadek had been paid a total of $67,966 by the city since he was appointed a patrolman a little more than 29 years ago. He has been a captain since 1918.

Cadek, who was relieved of duty during the inquiry by Police Chief George J. Matowitz, was questioned by the prosecutor yesterday.

Cullitan said the police captain admitted ownership of the savings accounts, most of which were in savings and loan companies and several under fictitious names.

"Cadek told us," the prosecutor said, "that he used those names because he did not want his relatives and friends to know he had so much money. He said he was afraid he would be pestered for loans."

"When we questioned him about the sources of the income that made the large accounts possible, Cadek would say nothing more than that it was 'legal money.' He would make no further explanation."

ILLINOIS GOES TO POLLS TODAY

Two Kidnapings Send Primaries Off to Turbulent Start

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, April 14.—Two kidnapings, with one election worker abducted under a policeman's fire, sent the Illinois primaries off to a turbulent start in Chicago today.

The violence came as a bumper Chicago registration began to pour into polling places. The first abduction victim reported to police was Ludwig Pyaszynski, 30, Democratic precinct captain.

The other victim was Paul Witkowski, 40, who the police were told, was identified as a retired business man and a personal friend of Governor Horner.

Find Marked Ballots
Two election judges were removed after the police reported they found 17 marked ballots on the person of Philip Zimmerman, 38.

Bitterness engendered by one of the most hectic campaigns of the century prompted elaborate precautions at the polls, as national leaders watched the voting in the Republican presidential preference duel between Senator William E. Borah of Idaho and Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News.

It was the first man-to-man test of two ranking contenders for the G. O. P. nomination. Observers agreed the results would have an important bearing on the party's pre-convention battle.

Headquarters of Knox, outspoken critic of the administration, promised a sweeping triumph. E. J. Cook, Borah manager, foresaw "a very handsome victory."

Democratic stalwarts concentrated on getting out a "smashing vote" for President Roosevelt—unopposed on their party's preferment ballot—to clinch their claims that Illinois was still in the new deal column. They anxiously awaited comparison of the Borah-Knox and Roosevelt totals as an indication of comparative popularity.

WENDEL PROBE PUSHES AHEAD

Indications Point Toward Release of Lindbergh Kidnapping Suspect

TRENTON, N. J., April 14.—The Mercer county grand jury ordered a continuous session, without a luncheon recess, today in an effort to end speedily its investigation of Paul H. Wendel, whose repudiated "confessions" delayed the electrocution of Bruno Hauptmann.

Indications in reliable quarters were that a "no bill" would be returned, freeing the former Trenton druggist of a murder complaint in connection with the kidnap-slaying of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., for whose death Hauptmann died in the electric chair.

The jury meeting followed a third futile attempt to get the New Jersey legislature to investigate the Lindbergh case.

A resolution by Assemblyman Basil B. Bruno for inquiry into the acts of all officials connected with the case, including Governor Harold G. Hoffman and state police, was tabled by the assembly last night, 57 to 1.

Whispers of "politics" were heard. The most persistent was that the grand jury would adjourn without taking action until after the primary elections, in which Governor Hoffman is opposed for delegate-at-large to the Republican national convention because of his activities on Hauptmann's behalf.

Major Allyne M. Freeman, grand jury foreman, characterized these reports as "ridiculous."

The refusal of Dr. John F. (Jafie) Condon to accept an invitation to appear before the grand jury was accepted as final.
